| WORKS IN PROGRESS | The Local Politics of Border Control . Dissertation. – This book-length project, supported by a Graduate Research Fellowship from the National Science Foundation, studies the intersection of borders, human security, and state-making. I take up the challenge of theorizing borderlands as unique geopolitical spaces and local communities as central actors. The theory explains local resistance against contemporary border hardening, how local populations psychologically adapt to changing borders, and the influence of bottom-up demands on the content of state policies. The mixed-methods design encompasses quantitative analyses with original geospatial data, qualitative fieldwork at the United States–Mexico border, and observational and experimental survey tests using national data. “We’ve always had a separation:” The Local Psychology of Border Walls. Gender and Public Demands for Border Security (with Michael R. Kenwick and Summer Lindsey). International Border Lengths Dataset. | |
